

I am a 33 year Flight Attendant and I feel that allowing cell phone usage on the aircraft is detrimental to all on board. It will create more tension among passengers because of the loudness with which people talk on their phones. Arguments may ensue. I also feel that terrorists could use them to coordinate deadly activity. Another point, in an emergency situation people may not hear vital information they need to know, not only for their benefit but for the others around them. Our environment is so stressful now that allowing cell phone use in flight is just adding to it. Marilyn Pike
